++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mostly dry with some frosty nights.

Today:
Many places dry with plenty of sunshine after a cold start. A few showers affecting east and southeast coasts of England. Turning milder and cloudier across northern Scotland with a little light rain or drizzle in places.

Tonight:
Increasingly cloudy in the north with a few spots of light rain or drizzle. Clear skies in the south allowing a widespread frost and a few fog patches to form.

Tuesday:
Cloud in the north will spread further south across the UK, with a little drizzle on coasts and hills. Sunnier skies probably persisting across southern England.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Settled with fog in the southeast at first. Rain spreading south, with sunshine and blustery showers following, wintry in the north. Unsettled for most on Friday, wintery in the north.
